Dental Hygienist??? | Yahoo Answers

Best Answer: well, if you have completed your 2 years already, you should apply to a tech school, but not any tech school.. it has to be one that offers the hygiene program... not a whole lot do... then based on your gpa from your first 2 yrs, they will decide if they want to interview you... its a very competitive degree to get... i think in my state, only 8 schools offer the program and each year, about 250 apply to each of them, and then only about 20 actually get into the school to get a hygiene degree. and if thats what you decide to do, you will need to get a job in a dentist office doing assisting or something similar.now, they like you to have at least a year experience to accept you into the school.

Dental Hygienist questions...? | Yahoo Answers

Best Answer: I'm not sure how schools are up there, but I know in Florida, dental school takes up a LOT of time, and you really don't have time to have a job while in school. Dentists do make good money, but they also acquire a large school loan (when I was looking to go to dental school I would have had to take out a $250,000 loan and that was like 4 years ago).
